

Minstead House - a brand new Residential Care service in Birmingham

CareTech has opened its latest residential care home in Birmingham which aims to provide an innovative new transitional service model for younger adults with a learning disability and / or autism who display behaviour that challenges.

Minstead House is located in the quiet residential area of Erdington, but enjoys all the benefits of being in the cosmopolitan city of Birmingham. The accommodation is provided to a very high specification and the two sides of the building are set up independently as 4-bed (en-suite) houses - each with its own lounge, separate kitchen and separate dining area / activity room. There is a garden and outdoor space to the rear of the property. One side of the property is for 4 females, and the other side is for 4 males. Each bedroom has its own private en-suite shower room. Support packages can be offered on a shared or a 1:1 basis depending on assessed need, with shared waking night support. Staff have been trained in supporting individuals with complex and challenging needs, Learning Disabilities and Autism Spectrum conditions. Clients will also be able to access our independent Psychologist for behavioural support.
